

JANE SCHEERER PARKES

Born in New York City to an economist father, and a culture-loving mother, Parkes gravitated to art along with her three siblings. All through school she was exposed to inspiring teachers and in 1980 graduated from New England School of Art and Design where she studied graphic Design. Drawn more to the craft of making art than to the commercial side, Parkes worked making architectural models for Ben Thompson in Boston and then Peter Marino in New York. After raising two boys in New York, she began working full time as an artist in New York and in Swans Island, Maine. Primarily a printmaker, Parkes also makes assemblage and is an illustrator
